Quake disaster staged

Mock 'Big One' at two schools

By Natalie Shore

Seismologists may have been unable to predict the arrival of the April 3 San Jose earthquake, but Alta Loma school officials were so prepared for the April 5 local temblor they even had their victims lined up.

Minutes before the 7.0 disaster struck on cue at 9 a.m., students in Kathy Haine's English class were already prepared to "duck and tuck" beneath their desks.

"If I see anyone who's not doing it, they're going to do it after school," Haine said.

Nearly a year in the making, "Quake Shake '89," was coordinated by the city of Rancho Cucamonga Emergency Services and Public Works. The mock Big One was simultaneously staged at Alta Loma and Etiwanda High Schools, and 10 local law enforcement, health care and community agencies participated.

The full-scale exercise took schools through the motions of evacuating thousands of people and rescuing more than 40 injured. Professional makeup was used to make severe cuts and burns seem authentic.

In less than an hour, Alta Loma was hit by a 9 a.m. earthquake and one aftershock. Within minutes, most of the students were evacuated to the football field, and an outdoor command post to coordinate rescue efforts and an information center for parents to contact were set up nearby.

Teams of Red Cross, Foothill Fire District and Mercy Ambulance workers and students located the injured.

Victims were tagged to identify the severity of their wounds, carried outside, stabilized if possible, and then sent to hospital emergency rooms.

The comprehensive exercise is designed to test Alta Loma High's ability to respond to a civil disaster, said Carol Younger, administrative intern who coordinated the morning's events. The goal is to pinpoint weak areas in current safety procedures and strengthen them, she said.

"We want to be prepared to respond to the needs of our students and the needs of our community," Younger said.

Students, all of whom were forwarned, differed over the value of the exercise.

Election violations charged

By Natalie Shore

An unsuccessful Alta Loma trustee candidate says he has asked the county grand jury to investigate possible campaign violations of the school district's March 7 election.

Gary Kendrick has formally asked that both the Alta Loma Educators Association and the Alta Loma School District be investigated.

Kendrick cited previous allegations that the feachers union allegedly used class lists to distribute literature supporting newly elected trustee Walter Collins, but he also has listed new charges that board members and school officials illegally used district equipment and time to prepare and send out pamphlets supporting Measure A, the district's successful $9 million school building bond.

"It's not sour grapes. I think the kids need honesty," he said.

Kendrick is charging that Citizens for Adequate School Housing, co-chaired by board President Robert Tangeman, used labels generated by district computers to send out Measure A campaign literature. Fliers bear the district's post office box return address and postage meter's mark, he said.

Employee time also was used because the superintendent's adminstrative assistant typed and initialed a thank-you note to Kendrick for his work on the Measure A campaign, he said.

Any district supplies used to promote the bond measure were paid for by campaign funds, said Superintendent John McMurtry.

"We kept a detailed accounting of any material and charged full rate back to the campaign fund. Nothing was charged to the district,"

McMurtry said

McMurtry said.
District officials say they have not been contacted by the grand jury to speak to Kendrick's charges. Board President

County honors five students for abuse work

Five local students have been recognized by the county of San Bernardino for their contributions to drug and alcohol abuse prevention.

The honors were conferred March 31 by the county Office of Alcohol and Drug Programs.

Kevin Ranker, Alta Loma High School senior, was the single recipient of the county's highest Ranker was given the Peer Concern Award for founding the Friday Night Live Chapter at his school, helping to start the Safe Rides program for Alta Loma and Upland high school students, and his work in students theater groups to boost self-esteem among his peers countywide.

The remaining students were winners in a countywide essay and poster contest. Freshman Anna Chin and sophomore Marisa Pittenger of Alta Loma High School won first and third place for their essays on "Be a Thinker not a Drinker.

Tangeman declined to comment on the investigation.

'I don't know what his actual filing is, so I don 't how to respond to it," Tangeman said.

A grand jury investigation will allow Kendrick to officially confirm what he already has been told, said teacher union President Richard Shetley. Teachers knew not to use class lists and participated in no illegal campaign activities, he

"I have all of the records and evidence, if he would like to do that officially," Shetley said.

Collins also repeated earlier comments that he ran an honest campaign. "I am not the least bit concerned," he said.

Because grand jury investigations are confidential, the San Bernardino County grand jury's office would neither confirm nor deny the request has been filed. Kendrick expects to hear on the investigation's status soon, he said.

The grand jury investigation is unrelated to a separate inquiry being conducted by the San Bernardino County District Attorney's Office.

Charges have not been filed, but the district attorney is checking into possible violations of state open meetings laws by the district's sex education advisory committee.

By Kimberly Heinrichs

RIVERSIDE - Irene Thompson had better things to do that morning last week than allow state officials to test the smog-control system in her 1982 Dodge Aries.

But the Moreno Valley resident delayed her errand to pick up an 84-year-old heart patient from a doctor's office because a California Highway Patrol officer asked her to. And because she thought it was important.

"I suppose there's so much smog they've got to do something," said Thompson, who battles both asthma and emphysema. "I suffer in the smog.

Thompson's was one of about 90 gasoline-powered vehicles randomly pulled over on Arlington Avenue in Riverside recently for a fiveminute smog check by an inspection team from the state Bureau of Automotive Repair and Air Resources Board. The traveling test center was set up much the way a police sobriety checkpoint is, with the difference that those in a hurry were allowed to pass by.

The purpose of the voluntary tests is to collect information, not to issue tickets, said Linda Whitney, a research manager with the bureau.

Similar tests were to be conducted in San Bernardino County this week. The smog check team was to be in Fontana Wednesday and in Ontario Friday.

'We're asking people to spend five minutes with us." Whitney said. "If people are in a hurry, we let them go. We don't encourage that. We want it as random as possible.'

Inspectors take a gas sample, check the tailpipe emissions and examine the smog-control devices to see whether they are intact.

The team sends the results back to Sacramento as they go. The program runs through July and results are expected next January.

Among other things, they will be used to determine whether the state's two-year smog check program should be made annual as has been proposed.

"We're trying to determine inuse tampering levels and also to compare the deterioration rate of vehicles from one smog check to another," she said.

The bureau will match these voluntary test results with those conducted at each vehicle's last required inspection, she explained.

William Dickey's 1982 Ford pickup has not had a tune-up since his last smog check two years ago, so he was not surprised by inspector Tom Engle's announcement that the truck owner had to "do a little work on that."

Unlike some of the other drivers questioned, Dickey is not in favor of going through smog check every year.

'I don't see paying the money," the Riverside resident said, puffing on a cigarette as he waited. "You know it costs 25 to 30 bucks every time you go down. As far as I'm concerned that's a waste of money.

But judging from the high carbon monoxide and hydrocarbon emissions from his tailpipe, Dickey's smog check bill later this month will rival his last one of $125.

Colleges claim programs help with minorities

Me paramery property

By Lorna Corpus

Programs already are in place to beef up recruitment of minority students and faculty at local public universities and community colleges, officials said following the release of a state public higher education review recently.

The 138-page report released by a joint legislative committee March 30 recommended improvements to the state's master plan for higher education.

The second such review since the plan's inception in 1960, the report focused on concerns that much of California's growing minority population would remain uneducated and underrepresented if not better served by the UC, Cal State and community college systems.

Proposals included better recruitment and preparation of minority students and more hiring of minority professors; requiring all undergraduates to enroll in an ethnic studies course and become competent in a second language; and ensuring guaranteed transfer arrangements by all community colleges to at least five UC campuses and three Cal State Officials at Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut; Cal State San Bernardino; and Cal Poly Pomona said the report underscored concerns that minority students transferring from community colleges somehow fare worse than their white counterparts.

But current attempts to improve enrollment and hiring practices are under way at their campuses, officials said.

Robert Detweiler, vice president of academic affairs at Cal State San Bernardino, said a recent review of general education policies at the school has led to introduction of an ethnics course requirement beginning next fall.

Where appropriate, a student's general education package also will include courses in women's studies.

Critics of the report said efforts to balance a racial scale may lessen college entrance opportunities for qualified white students.

But at the San Bernardino campus, which reportedly is able to admit all its qualified applicants, Detweiler said he favored special efforts to obtain minority students because "It's too important an issue to ignore.

At Cal Poly Pomona, which employs some 590 tenured faculty members, roughly 20 percent of those people are under-represented minorities including black, Asians and Latinos, said Dave Edmonds, associate vice president of faculty affairs.

Although Cal State San Bernardino intends to hire 50 new faculty members - 20 percent of which will be minorities — the Pomona campus does not have a local hiring quota.

But faculty diversity programs that attract a large number of women and minority applicants; programs that allow professors to obtain the highest educational degree status and thus encourage tenure; and applicant information pools shared among Cal State schools all encourage minority hiring practices, Edmonds said

Joe Zagorski, vice president of instructional and student services at Mt. San Antonio College praised the school's minority enrollment increase in recent years.

Etiwanda teen chosen as 'peace ambassador'

Rob Trostle hopes to become an ambassador of peace.

The Etiwanda teen-ager has been selected in the People to People Student Ambassador Program that will include a 31day tour of Russia and Europe.

The Etiwanda High School junior said one of his favorite classes always has been geography and that interest definitely will help.

There will be a delegation of about 30 of us going. We'll be traveling to England, Sweden, Denmark, Finland and the Soviet Union. I can't wait to get a taste of their cultures and lifestyles," Trostle said.

Although the People to People program has operated since Dwight D. Eisenhower first initiated it in 1963, Trostle has the distinction of being among the first group of San Bernardino County teen-agers to participate. Of the 250 county teens first nominated for the program, only 30 were chosen Trostle has been involved in student government since he was a freshman. He is the Associated Student Body vice president this year and will serve as its president next year In addition, he has been the yearbook co-editor, varsity football team leader, a threeyear member of the track team, a varsity yell leader and a Christian summer camp leader.

"I've always been interested in politics and I'd like to get involved on the city level someday. But my goal with the program is to meet as many people as possible and learn from them. I think it will just be fascinating to visit Russia. I want to see things first-hand for myself. I want to see how they view us. I really think this is a good way to help world peace.

Well, at least it's a start," he

As part of his trips to Moscow and Leningrad, Trostle and his fellow ambassadors have been invited to enter a youth camp or school. And for the first time, Soviet students will be allowed to accompany their American counterparts on the trip in their homeland.

The Soviet government even is allowing American students to carry video cameras on their

This new openness in the Soviet Union already is an accomplishment," he said. "I'm really trying to keep an open mind about Russia. I know it will be very different from America and I don't want to take any stereotypes with me," he said. "The people with the program tell us we will definitely change when we come back.'

His mother, Sue, said she

"You can go to school and not learn what he will learn on this trip. I just wish I were going," she said. "The people in the program tell them they will come back with a new appreciation of freedom.'

Trostle said he doesn't know how he was selected for the program, just that the program told him he had been nominated. Since securing a spot on the team, he has attended classes on the third Sunday of the month to learn about the countries he will visit. He's learned six familiar phrases in the languages of the countries he will visit so he can at least be courteous.

WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!!

the information they want and get the results... YOU want.

be complete.

Put yourself in the reader's place. If you were considering buying this item what would you want to know about it? Give the item's age, condition, size, brand name and any other information needed to describe it accurately and completely.

avoid abbreviations.

A few standard abbreviations can help you save space but don't overdo it. Too many abbreviations will make your ad look like a secret coded message. Rather than trying to figure out what you're trying to say, confused readers will go on to the next ad.

include price.

Price is one of the biggest concerns of classified readers. Ads that list prices will get their attention first. Including the price will also help you avoid inquiries from readers not in your price range.

be available.

List your telephone number or address so potential buyers will know HOW to contact you. State the best hours to call so they'll know WHEN to contact you. If you're not home when an interested prospect calls, chances are he won't call back.

feel free to ask for help.

Because help is free for the asking. The Daily Report maintains a staff of professional Advisors who write dozens of ads every day. They'll be happy to help you word your ad for the best results.
